Family Surveys Show Overwhelmingly Positive Engagement

The Performance-based Standards (PbS) Family-Youth Initiative (FYI) collected more than 500 surveys from family members of youths either currently in or recently released from secure facilities and the April 2013 results show the vast majority reported positive experiences with facilities.

"This is a very exciting and essential component of PbS and we're pleased to see these first results show better-than-expected relationships between facilities and families," said PbS Learning Institute Executive Director Kim Godfrey. "And more importantly, we've already seen facilities change practices in direct response to what families have said to give families more access to their children and information about their treatment."
